Introduction

Neighbourhood Profiles

Neighbourhood profiles have been developed as the first step in the neighbourhood planning process and ultimately towards producing comprehensive neighbourhood plans. The profiles focus on individual neighbourhood planning areas, which are made up of one or more neighbourhoods and surrounding open spaces, and describe the key characteristics of the area using statistical evidence from a range of sources. The profiles play an important part in the identification of issues and priorities within neighbourhoods.

Neighbourhood Plans

Neighbourhood plans are intended to tackle issues particular to a neighbourhood, ensuring that local services are co-ordinated, effective and are accountable to local people, meeting their expectations. Plans are pivotal in joining up service delivery at a local level and narrowing the gap for the most disadvantaged communities.

Plans initially examine the characteristics of each neighbourhood through the completion of a neighbourhood profile. The plans then describe and evaluate the services that are delivered there. The plans will also identify the issues experienced by local people and will ultimately form an action plan for tackling the challenges identified.

The five key stages are described below:

- Stage 1 - Creation of a baseline report or neighbourhood profile, outlining the neighbourhood characteristics, assets and issues.
- Stage 2 - Gathering the views of elected representatives.
- Stage 3 - Creation of a service profile describing the service offer in each neighbourhood.
- Stage 4 - Consultation process with local people that gathers issues and challenges facing the neighbourhood and residents views of service delivery.
- Stage 5 - Formation of an action plan for the neighbourhood.

Sheriff Hill Neighbourhood Profile

This profile primarily uses neighbourhood level data. In some instances data is only available at other geographical levels such as wards and Lower Layer Super Output Areas, which are boundaries created by the Office for National Statistics to present Census and other data for small areas. However, whatever geography has been used, all tables show all of the geographical units within or substantially within the neighbourhood management area and highlight in red, the neighbourhoods within Sheriff Hill neighbourhood planning area. In addition, all tables indicate the Gateshead average as well as highest and lowest values. All of the VI maps display the area covered by the plan area in blue and the five maps below identify neighbourhood, plan area, LLSOA and pre 2004 ward boundaries for reference purposes. Where necessary geographic units containing data on less than 5 individuals have been excluded to prevent disclosure.

Approach to Statistics at a Neighbourhood Level

Neighbourhood level data has been displayed as often as possible in this document. In some instances data is only available at other geographic levels such as wards and Lower Layer Super Output Areas, which are boundaries created by the Office for National Statistics to present data for small areas. However, whatever geography has been used, maps show all of the geographical units within, partially or substantially within the neighbourhood management area. Tables only show those units within or substantially within the area. In addition, tables indicate the Gateshead average, high and low values.

Vitality Index 2006
